This May, we recognize the love, resilience, and dedication of mothers and caregivers. View in browser

Mother's Day Never Ends

Behind every journey of care, there is often a mother who kept going.

Mother's Day is also a time to recognize the mothers who continue to care for and support their neurodivergent adult children with deep commitment, strength, and love.

Their role often extends far beyond what is typically seen or acknowledged, involving ongoing advocacy, emotional support, coordination, and care across every stage of life.

At Maison WILOH, we honour these mothers and caregivers whose dedication helps shape more secure, compassionate, and inclusive futures for their families.

Community Through Communication (CTC) Recap

Community Through Communication: Meaningful Conversations, Shared Concerns

CTC, Community Through Communication, brings together members of the Maison WILOH community for meaningful, open conversations in a welcoming and respectful environment. Hosted in comfortable home settings, these gatherings create space for connection, shared experiences, and thoughtful dialogue.

The meetings are held monthly, alternating between a Monday morning gathering and a Friday evening gathering. The most recent meeting took place on Friday, April 17 at 6:30 p.m., where participants were warmly welcomed by the host and hostess for an evening that included a delicious potluck spread, thoughtful conversation, and time to get to know one another better.

As the group gathered around the table, participants touched on questions that are close to their hearts, especially as they relate to their children's future. Parents shared very real concerns about ensuring that their children are well represented legally and financially through tools such as tutorship, wills, trusts, and other planning measures.

One of the main takeaways from the evening was the importance of becoming better informed on these topics. The group agreed that an information session would be of great benefit to Maison WILOH parents and their children. This recommendation will be brought back to the Maison WILOH board for further discussion and planning.

Upcoming Gatherings
